B. W. STEELE,
Manager of the Gazette.

We publish the following petition to Major J. W. Powell director of the United States geological survey, protesting against the removal of the Denver office to Washington. The Denver office has become a great source of information to miners mineral surveyors, civil engineers and others, and its removal would be seriously felt. The petition contains the name of many of the state's distinguished and progressive citizens, which should entitle it to the most careful consideration.

Senator Stewart of Nevada has taken a very decided and manly position with reference to the confirmation of Mr Lamar as associate justice of the supreme court. He states that he knows of no man who bore arms against the United States in the late war, who has so unreservedly accepted the verdict of arms and maintained the validity of the new amendments to the constitution as Mr Lamar. Senator Stewart declares that he will vote to confirm him, and urges his republican colleagues of the north and west to do the same.

Representative Milliken of Maine is the first congressman to introduce a tariff reduction bill. His measure contemplates taking the tax off tobacco and removing the duty on sugar. But he proposes to pay native sugar producers a bounty to compensate them for the removal of the duty. As Mr. Milliken is a Maine republican, it is reasonable to suppose that he indorses Mr Blaine's letter, at least that part of it which is in favor of the repeal of the tax on tea. Mr. Milliken should have consulted of his Iowa republican colleagues before introducing his measure: for the republicans of Iowa stand committed to the fact that tea is an luxury and a luxury and not a necessity. In that state the republican party has introduced a course of instruction in the public schools the object of which is to inculcate upon the mind of the coming generation that the use of tea is injurious. Mr. Milliken and Mr Blaine regard it as a necessity of life, and entitled to be classed with all the domestic commodities, such as bread, meat, groceries, etc. In this connection the views of Senators Wilson and Allison of Iowa would be interesting.

The gross earnings of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad last year amounted to $27,769,999 and the net earnings to $10,981,671. This corporation has only recently passed out of the hands of a receiver. It is safe to say that such mismanagement has not been equalled by any railroad company in the country. It has controlled the coal trade of a portion of eastern Pennsylvania for several years, and its freight and passenger traffic has always been large. The secret of the mismanagement which has controlled its affairs is found in its enormous profits. The stock of the company has been of comparatively little value, and the stock holders have had no share in its profits. The men who controlled the affairs of the corporation piled up a mountain of debt upon it until it was entirely insolvent. After they had mortgaged the road for every cent they could obtain it failed to pay the interest required and passed into the hands of the court. It was only after several committees had been made on the part of the bond holders and stock holders that the latter regained control of the road. The Philadelphia & Reading railroad is a perfect example of corporate mismanagement. It has distributed every dollar which it has received, to contractors, engineers and lawyers, and has borne the burden of its enormous debt without the means of its payment. Only while it was in the hands of a receiver has it been able to pay its interest. Now if it can be sold by some of those who do not understand the signs of the times unless we do this ourselves prudently and wisely, we shall before long be compelled to submit to a violation of duties made rudely and without the discussion which will shock it, and shatter it and protected industries.

If such a stench and reputation republican as General Garfield could not defeat in 1876 when there was not a surplus of $100,000,000 annually from over taxation, surely it applies with particular force at the present time. Senator Sherman believes that duties should never be lowered, and that such taxation must be preserved. General Garfield on the other hand favors a lowering of the duties which never could be done safely. Between the views of these leaders no two democrats should be able to agree. Both of the republican candidates cannot be right. One of them is wrong, while that of the democratic party is right.

Colorado Mining and Smelting for 1887.

The Mining Journal says:

The figures herewith given for the values of Colorado's mineral products during the year 1887 will be compared with the general public and the mining press. Lucky indeed is Colorado in having its wealth so well known that there can be no doubt by the enquiring points than during the preceding year, and that more work was done in the mines than during any year of the state's history. The best posted statistical men have estimated that the production of 1887 would exceed that of the previous year by at least $2 per cent, and the total was placed anywhere from $27,000,000 to $30,000,000. Instead of such being the facts the product has apparently fallen off over $2,000,000.

The estimates herewith given are based upon the reports furnished by smelters of the value of the production and the amount which should be credited to Colorado upon the deposits of ore and placer gold in the state and the value of the gold which was sold by its producers directly to manufacturers and to eastern mints or buyers. The two latter amounts are largely estimates, but they are based upon reliable information. There are no other sources from which estimates can be obtained with which to verify the two of duplicating returns, and these four sources necessarily cover the entire product. If these figures are materially wrong, the fault must be with the smelters. But it is believed that they are more nearly correct than any estimate of the state's product so far has ever been made.

The average prices of silver and lead during the year 1887 were $1.034 per ounce for silver and $4.054 per hundred for lead. During the past year the average prices have been 97 cents and $4.50 respectively, and these prices have reduced the value of the product over $1,000,000 below what it would have been at the quotations of the preceding year.

The value of the metals produced during the year is Gold $3,000,000, lead $5,400,000, copper, $240,000, and silver, $14,000,000, in round numbers.
